

31 October 2008 - Media release

Recruitment Excellence Awards winners Wavelength International celebrate

Wavelength International was announced winner of the Best Boutique Agency Award at the Inaugural Recruitment Excellence Awards (REA) 2008 gala dinner event on 24 October at Sydney's Dockside. The evening, hosted by comedic actress Julia Morris, brought together well over 100 industry professionals and celebrated quality and innovation among recruitment firms across Australia.

The aim the REA, an initiative of 'recruitment extra' magazine and its publisher Thomson Reuters, is to recognise quality business practice and benchmark service among Australian recruitment firms, performance and innovation across a range of business types.

Lesley Horsburgh, Managing Editor and driving force behind the Awards said, "The response from the industry to the REA has been overwhelming and extremely encouraging. It highlights the increasing level of professionalism from both new and long-established recruitment firms, and marks a very positive end to what has been a challenging year for recruitment."

Assessed by a panel of independent judges, the Awards enabled firms to nominate for the following categories:

- Best Start-Up Agency
- Best Boutique Agency
- Best National Agency
- Best Multinational Agency
- Best Agency Website
- Best Brand
- Best Candidate Management Program
- Best Attraction & Retention Strategy
- Best Learning & Development Program
- The Deloitte Growth Award

Winners were selected on the quality of their application content, referrals from clients, staff and candidates selected at random, along with evidence of internal procedures and practice. Congratulations to Wavelength International, winner of the Best Boutique Agency Award.